

Giorgi (George) Gigauri is serving as the Chief of Mission of the International Organization for Migration (IOM) in Bangladesh since May 2018.

Prior to his current appointment he was the IOM Deputy Chief of Mission in Indonesia, overseeing a programme portfolio, which included humanitarian emergencies, migrant protection, governance and development.

Before that he served as the IOM Chief of Mission in Papua New Guinea, leading programmes in disaster management, community stabilization, and border management.

Previous postings with IOM include Head of Programme Support in Ukraine, Project Development Officer in Moldova, and research support at the Regional Office in Austria. He has also led numerous emergency response surge teams in Asia-Pacific.

Giorgi is a national of Georgia and holds a Master's degree from the University of Oxford, Bachelor's degree from the University of Warwick, and a PhD from The Grigol Robakidze University. He speaks Georgian, Ukrainian, Russian and English.